Graduate Student Writers' Group

This semester, the Language Center at Humboldt University is going to set up a another writers' group in the social sciences and the humanities.

A writers' group is composed of graduate and post-graduate students who get together regularly every two to three weeks to read and discuss each other's writing.

Working with peers has many benefits. Because each of you knows what the others are going through, you can provide useful insights and support. You can mutually challenge, critique, and help each other. You are not alone!

The Language Center will provide a trained facilitator to assist in setting up the group (and, if needed, provide a room). He will also participate in the group.

If you are interested in joining such a group or in finding out more, please contact:
